Understanding Your Backlinking Profile:

Backlinks are hyperlinks coming from one web page to your website. A good example of understanding backlinking is to think of it as a similar approach to your friends recommending a restaurant. The more people that recommend you to a place, the higher the chances are that you will go there. But these recommendations also need to come from people who you trust.

The more and better backlinks you have, the more google will trust your website and bring you to the top of search results pages. So, getting backlinks from domains with high authority scores is important. Examples of high authority domains include the likes of Yell, Trustpilot... and low authority domains include 'spammy' blog forums and other non-trusted websites.

Referring Domains:

The total number of active referring domains(websites) that have at least one backlink leading to your website.
